

Thais Nunez

March 16, 2020

The online community I am observing and writing about are the Forex Traders. Forex Traders are known for trading money, oil, and even gold. They study the stock market and everything that involves it. They have their own online school to help people understand the stock market and how to trade in it. They use platforms such as social media to voice out their businesses, but they also have connections and continue to expand them.

While I take account their hard work on the market, they are very positive people. They have certain phrases; for example, “sheesh” when someone does something in advancing their mindset or career. They are very big on supporting each other and making people think their best. I also had taken notes on hoe they do not like when people say the words “want” or “hate.” They always say that people will always manifest their dreams by making their mindset positive enough to support their aspirations. Forex Traders look for ways to elevate the people they work with. They look for ways to better their communications and resources. They try to bring awareness of the corrupt capitalism of this country and try to help people become liberated of the 9-5 job mindset.

A specific group, which I now work with, is known as Empire. Empire helps people come to terms with making money from their phone. The mentors on Empire constantly check up on people and make sure that they are doing the right procedures to get their money.